FOCUS ON JACK SIDNELL

Professor Jack Sidnell is an expert on conversation analysis, philosophy of language, children, grammar and interaction, gaze, gesture, and creoles. His area of specialization is the Caribbean. Sidnell’s research focuses on the organization of social interaction and branches out into a number of topics in anthropology and linguistics. He combines attention to details of talk and other forms of conduct with broader questions about social relations, social organization, context, culture and the nature of social reality.

His approach to the study of language in social life emphasizes the importance of linguistic diversity and the role of language in evaluative self-reflection.

WHAT CAN WE OFFER?

Looking for a place to pursue cutting-edge research in Linguistic and Semiotic Anthropology? Look no further than the University of Toronto.

Our Department of Anthropology has much to offer in anthropological linguistics and semiotics, drawing also on our strengths in social-cultural anthropology and cognate departments, such as Linguistics. Our diverse array of courses reflects the broad interests of faculty who work on language and other signifying systems.

Our expertise in these areas and related pragmatics of cultural studies includes media studies, youth culture, and the role of language in construction of social difference. Some of our faculty are among the leading authorities on orientalism, games and puzzles, stratified reproduction, conversation analysis, and creoles. Their research also spans the globe, with projects in Canada, South Asia, Southeast Asia, East Africa, the Middle East, and the Philippines. There are numerous opportunities for graduate students to pursue research in these areas.

DOCTORAL PROGRAMS are primarily research degrees that culminate in the writing of a thesis. Minimum of one year residence in Toronto is required.

PhD DIRECT ENTRY STREAM
For students entering from a bachelor's degree who have attained a CGPA of 3.85 or better.

PhD REGULAR STREAM
For students entering with a Master's degree.

MASTER’S PROGRAMS are course based programs that culminate in the writing of a Master’s Research paper (MRP). Part-time or full-time study is available.

MASTER OF ARTS – 12-month program
MASTER OF SCIENCE – 24-month program

FOCUS ON YOUR CAREER

What can you do with your graduate degree? Many of our students go on to academic careers at universities and colleges in Canada, the U.S. and prestigious universities worldwide. Others go on to private sector work related to their discipline.

Our program offers a selection of professional development workshops and training opportunities to help you explore various career paths so you can take your career to the next level. Whether you choose an academic or private sector career, we will get you on the right track to success.

Attending a conference can help increase your networking opportunities.
