SOCI 5806F
Decolonizing Sociology: Intersections, Contradictions and Possibilities

Instructor	Laura Hall
Term	Fall 2024
Course Delivery	In Person
Email Address	LauraJ.Hall@carleton.ca

COURSE DESCRIPTION

This course will examine the ways that sociology is being transformed through decolonial principles, activism/s and theories. The course will also explore the ways that these endeavours struggle in the face of systems of domination. We will look at Indigenous feminisms, settler colonial theories, postcolonial scholarship, and the intersections that push even further toward a creative and systemic approach to theorizing power and transformation. We will discuss the works of people like Jodi Byrd on 'Zombie Imperialism', and Tuck and Yang's 'Decolonization is Not a Metaphor,' among other works.