In my academic unit, very few students undertake theses because the program is very heavy on mandatory course requirements. Over the past six years, I have completed supervisions of 14 Masters level Research Essays, 20 theses, 36 directed studies and 16 BA Honour's theses (HREs). In 2005 and 2017 I was awarded the 'Excellence in Teaching Award' by the Masters of Public Administration Society, one of the criteria being the quality of supervision and research training. In 2009 I was also awarded the faculty of Public Affairs teaching award and in 2010 received the university teaching award. I have also been instrumental in promoting and institutionalizing PhD students within the department's research activities and have co-authored 12 papers with PhD and MPA students with 3 more currently in progress. As the manager of several funded research projects I have also been responsible for training and development over 50 RA students.

In the UK I was responsible for supervising approximately 35 MBA theses (over 7 years), all of which were successfully completed. I was also the second supervisor for three PhDs before emigrating to Canada. In recognition of my commitment to student development and research methods at Imperial College I was appointed to the position of Senior Post Graduate Tutor (Business School) with specific responsibility for providing academic advice and guidance to MBA and doctoral students. I was also appointed external examiner at the LSE for BA, MA and PhD theses and examinations

Involvement of Students in my Research:

In each of my funded research projects, I have made extensive use of graduate students and have always attempted to give them meaningful assignments that complement their own research interests. Many of the graduate students and Research Assistants whom I supervise are often given joint authorship on publications and encouraged to present papers at conferences and seminars.
