HOW CAN WE SUPPORT OUR STUDENTS?

THE FACULTY PERSPECTIVE

Ensure every correspondence is compassionate, even if it is firm. Bear in mind when students are not doing well, sometimes they can act out – it is therefore meaningful to approach issues of conduct from the perspective of care and support.

When in doubt contact the Office of Student Affairs at osareports@carleton.ca.

If a student is completely disengaged from the course, it could mean:

1) They are REALLY not doing well.
2) They are relying on friends or other sources to study/get notes.
3) Procrastination for a myriad of personal reasons.

ADDRESS MENTAL HEALTH AND WELLNESS WITH YOUR STUDENTS

Talk about it in a lecture
Send it in an email
Write notes in your course outline
Write notes in your CuLearn page

This acknowledges student mental health and reassures them you are a safe person to contact.

TYPICAL BEHAVIOUR

#1 - "Ghosting" - student not showing up, not handing anything in at all.

#2 - Student not handing things in on time, repeatedly asking for extensions. May explicitly say they are overwhelmed, or that they are not doing well.

The common response is to be kind and offer extensions.

This is a bandaid solution; we can also provide supports.

HOW TO RESPOND

Are they registered with PMC? Encourage them to engage with their PMC Coordinator to see if they need additional supports.

Are they experiencing any changes in mood/anxiety/are they not doing well? (See page 2)

Are they overwhelmed, struggling to organize their time? Refer to CSAB and FITA

You or the TA can be occasionally checking in/reaching out, and providing appropriate referrals. (See page 2)

Lead with compassion. Learn with respect.

IN COLLABORATION WITH DR. KIM HELLEMANS, DEPARTMENT OF NEUROSCIENCE
Do you understand your students? Do you know how they are feeling mentally, physically and emotionally?

Sometimes students will tell you when they are not feeling well. Telling someone can be an overwhelming thing for a student to do, so it makes sense to ask:

“I am concerned you’re not handing in assignments/meeting deadlines/showing up to tutorials – is everything OK?”

If a student contacts you at the end of the term, trying to make up for lost time, this may be accompanied by an explanation relating to their health, family, or other circumstances.

If a student has not completed any work all term, this is symptomatic of bigger issues and supports should be provided.

In some of these extreme cases, it is helpful to refer to the Registrar’s Office for a petition for back-dated withdrawal. If the student has medical or other documentation, this is possible and in rare cases even sometimes a back-dated financial withdrawal. Submit a Care Report and the Office of Student Affairs can assist the student in navigating this process.

Debrief – an important step after a difficult conversation and doing so with your chair or supervisor is appropriate.

Report up not out – keeping your chair or supervisor informed is key, and other Carleton employees on a “need to know basis” is appropriate.

When concerned for a student’s safety, don’t hesitate; you are trying to help them access support.

When in doubt – Care Report

Follow up with the student if appropriate just to check-in that they are not having trouble accessing supports you provided.
