

Join us (virtually) on March 18, 2022 for the Underhill Graduate Student Colloquium, presented by Carleton's Department of History. Our theme, (Re)thinking History, is meant to forefront work going beyond the traditional bounds of academia including the sources being studied, the way we work, how we approach archives, how we share our work, the themes we consider, and the communities involved. Academic history needs to adapt to the times, and we would like this conference to do so as well. To that end, this year's colloquium will feature graduate work as well as two keynote presentations that discuss history in the public sphere, in the archives, in classrooms, and in academic institutions - all with an understanding that capital 'H' history needs to change in order to reflect our communities, our students, and to put into practice long overdue action items from the TRC report.

With this focus on METHOD as PRACTICE, we are looking for MA and PhD submissions from all disciplines that consider the following:

- 1) considerations in our practice (i.e., efforts to decolonize the sources we use, the bibliographies we create, and the ways we engage with and approach archives and archival practice)
- 2) non-mainstream and/or non-textually based sources (i.e., oral histories, local newspapers and magazines, museum exhibits, zines, public art, podcasts, music, film, comic books, Instagram posts, and/or other material and popular culture)
- 3) methods of engaging our publics and disseminating research (i.e., open access; multimedia including podcasts, film, and digital exhibits; cross-disciplinary partnerships)

Are you working with sources in a creative way, trying a new method, or presenting your research in a different way? Or, are you engaging with traditional academic sources in a way that shares new information, re-examines interpretations, or that serves a different public? Do you have a workshop idea that considers different platforms for engagement?

If any of those apply to you, then we'd love to hear about your research!

While we welcome all submissions, we would especially invite those that (re)think history in pragmatic and pedagogical ways that move theoretical discussions into meaningful practice.

Ready? Submit your ideas, panel proposals, and paper abstracts via Google Form by Feb 4, 2022.

The Underhill Colloquium is a graduate student-run conference spotlighting MA and PhD student work, with keynote presentations from respected public historians and academic scholars. We welcome submissions from graduate students in all disciplines on history-related topics spanning the spectrum of faculties, methodologies, formats, and dialogues. Priority goes to Carleton students. The Underhill Colloquium is made possible by the generous contribution of the Frank H. Underhill donation.

We wish to acknowledge that this Colloquium (and Carleton itself) takes place on the traditional and unceded territory of the Algonquin Anishinaabek/ Omamiwininiwag. While the conference is virtual, their presence here since time immemorial must be acknowledged.
